Kajal Nair has been a closet jewellery designer since she was 8. It was only in 2010, after visiting a friend in California that she launched her brand Nv-ya Fine Jewellery (pronounced Nooya). The brand means a rock in Cherokee.

Finally in July 2012, the Mumbai based designer decided to go full-time, quitting her high-profile job in the Life Insurance sector. She formally debuted as a designer in the India International Jewellery Week in 2013 and there hasn't been any looking back since.

Her target audience is the independent woman who loves something eclectic. Her designs are also very popular with overseas customers based in Singapore, USA and Australia.

Kajal calls herself a 'Chameleon Designer' as goes beneath the skin of her customers who want something special designed for them. The designs must speak to them and reflect their personality.

She also keeps an inventory of contemporary fine jewels, which is her personal design style. She loves working with gold, precious and semi-precious stones. ■
